AN AFFLICTED FAMILY.

The death of Miss Bessie, daughter of Prof. Wm. T. and Lizzie Gage, as recorded in the following from Hartford (Conn.) papers, will bring sorrow to many in this community. Prof. Gage was principal of our graded school in 1864, and married Miss Lizzie Godwin, removing not long thereafter to Kansas, where Miss Bessie was born. We remember the bright little girl when the family were here on a brief visit, being then enroute to the east. Mrs. Gage is niece of R. O. Peters and Mrs. Robert Dott.

In a brief note to his sister, Mrs. M. C. Thompson, of Cass, Mr. Gage gives expression to the intensity of the sorrow that has fallen upon his home in these words: "We are broken-hearted. The joy and gladness of our hearts is perished. Bessie was our darling, just bursting into glorious young womanhood. She was sick only a week, of rheumatic fever."

The following communication is taken from a Hartford paper:

We cannot refrain from giving expression to what may be called the public grief over the loss of one of the brightest, sweetest and most gifted girls whom death has claimed for a long time within the range of our acquaintance. Bessie Gage, the only daughter of Prof. W. T. Gage, recently the principal of the Hartford Female Seminary, was snatched away within a week by fever, and although many older and better known were summoned home that same week, there was so much blasted hope and blighted promise in her loss that we can hardly give utterance to the depth of sorrow not only in the hearts of the family but of a very large circle of friends. Bessie was uncommonly beautiful, and although a few months short of fifteen years of age, was fully developed, and in the graces of womanhood she was hardly surpassed by any. Radiant, exuberant, swiftly apprehensive in study, of a rare musical aptitude, bright in all social intercourse, light of foot and quick of hand in all movement, she filled the horizon of observation in every circle in which she was present and fascinated every eye. She was of course the darling of her home, and the hopes of a brilliant and beneficent career dashed in a moment. Within an hour after she died last Saturday, the tidings had run through every street and store in Hartford, "Bessie Gage is dead." Her father had been summoned from Detroit, and was so happy as to reach home on Friday, one day before she passed away, and to receive the greetings of his daughter. Even then there was no apprehension of great danger. On Sunday, the day after she died, it was the theme of common conversation and the strongest expressions of sympathy were heard on every hand. Rev. Dr. Gage, her pastor, made an indirect but feeling allusion to this loss in his sermon as well as in the pastoral prayer, and scores of notes and masses of flowers poured in from all sides. One most touching and delicate token of sympathy was the offer of Mrs. Dr. Stearns of the Retreat, that Bessie should lie by the side of their darling Ellen, Bessie's friend, in the family lot, and be cared for as their own daughter. This was thankfully accepted, as Mr. Gage is hereafter to live in Detroit, and this will be one more tie to bind him to his former Hartford home. It would be pleasant to say more, but we must not; save to add that, in the beautiful language of Prof. Gage on the morning of Bessie's funeral, "Her soul was too large for her body; like the butterfly, the chrysalis had to burst its shell and take wings and fly away." Peace to the dead, and peace to the mourning hearts left behind! May their great affliction bring heaven nearer to them and bring them nearer to heaven!

Mrs. Farrell O'Rourke.

Mrs. Catherine O'Donnell O'Rourke passed away Wednesday morning at her home in this city after an illness dating from last March, when she was stricken with paralysis. Anamosa had been her home for nearly fifty years, and here in Holy Cross cemetery the tired body will rest after its long struggle.

Mrs. O'Rourke was born in County Sligo, Ireland, November 25, 1832. At the age of twenty she married Farrell O'Rourke at Summit Hill, Penn., to which union were born six children: Mrs. Margaret McKinstry of Anamosa; Mrs. Katherine Wilsey of Dubuque; Mrs. John Hudner of Pittsfield, Mass.; Mrs. Anna McDonnell and James O'Rourke of Duluth, Minn.; Thomas, deceased. Eighteen grandchildren and five great grandchildren will carry her teachings on in the world; while the devotion of her children to a tender and loving mother was demonstrated through seven long months of untiring service. She is survived by her husband, a loving companion for sixty years, to whom the sympathy of all goes out.

The obsequies will be held at St. Patrick's church tomorrow (Friday) morning at 10:30 o'clock.

In a recent address before the American Meat Packer's Association, John T. Russell, president of the United Butchers of America, advocated "grabstaking" worthy settlers on western lands by wealthy men as a means of increasing the supply of live stock.

Farrell O'Rourke

Farrell O'Rourke was born in County Cavan, Ireland about the year 1820 and came to America in the fifties. He was married in Pennsylvania to Miss Catherine O'Donnell in 1851. He came to Stone City when the Quarries were opened there and later took a position with the State as foreman of the State Quarry which position he held over thirty years.

To Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke were born six children. James, and Mrs. Anna McDonnell of Duluth; Mrs. Kate Wiley of Dubuque; Mrs. John Hodner, Pittsfield, Mass; Mrs. Margaret McKinstry, Sioux City, Iowa. One son Thomas, died several years ago. A number of grandchildren and great grandchildren also survive. The wife and mother died a few years ago. A few months ago Mr O'Rourke went to the home of his daughter Anna McDonnell at Duluth where he was tenderly cared for and until he was taken suddenly ill a few days ago was in good health though feeble. He died last Saturday and the Duluth papers stated that he was supposed to be the oldest resident of that city. The remains came to Anamosa Tuesday evening and were placed before the altar at which he had worshipped for more than 40 years. The funeral took place Wednesday at 10. a. m. at St. Patrick's Church. Rev. Father Powers officiating. Father Powers paid a high tribute to the sturdy pioneer. The pall bearers were P. Hayes, Ed. Foley, Martin McCarty, John Flaherty, Michael Tracy and E. J. Dana. Burial was in Holy Cross Cemetery beside his wife.

The Hartford Courant gives expression to the public sorrow which this sad event caused in the following editorial :

The funeral of Bessie Gage took place at the Pearl street church yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Prayer was offered at the house by the Rev. Mr. Dudley, of Cromwell, at 12:30 but the public services were conducted by the Rev. Dr. Gage, a near kinsman as well as pastor of the family. The flowers and floral emblems were very numerous and very beautiful. It would be useless to attempt to enumerate all the offerings which friends had contributed. There were, for example, more than half a bushel of English violets. A basket of the largest and most exquisite flowers came from the Cromwell Sunday school, of which Bessie was for two years a member. A beautiful pillow was given by the Charter Oak lodge of Odd Fellows, another by the pupils of the Female Seminary, and a large "Gates Ajar" came from the classmates of Bessie in the High School. A striking object was a white dove, with forget-me-nots in its bill, hovering over the casket. This came from a friend, and was much admired.

The bearers were Messrs. Charles Tolles, Charles H. Prentice, S. P. Davis and Frank Pratt. The church was full with the exception of a few pews in the broad aisle, and it is rare that a funeral is so impressive. The fact that the officiating clergyman was, with the exception of a sister of Professor Gage, the nearest of kin present was very unusual, but it added, if possible, deeper tenderness to Dr. Gage's voice and words. Mrs. Huntington sang the beautiful solo by Mendelssohn, "O for the wings of a dove," and a quartette composed of Mr. Gundlach, Mr. Huntington, Mrs. Huntington and Miss Keeney sang Barnaby's exquisite "Paradise." The burial was at Cedar Hill, and by the kindness of Dr. and Mrs. Stearns, Bessie will be buried in their own lot, by the side of their own daughter Ella, a dear playmate of the beautiful girl who was buried yesterday.

Services Monday For Mrs. Quigley

Mrs. Robert Quigley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Potter of Anamosa, died at her farm home north of Anamosa Friday noon. She ended her own life by discharging a shotgun into her body. Worry over ill health, causing temporary mental derangement, was given as the cause by Coroner Leonard Iverson, who investigated and found no inquest necessary.

Funeral services, postponed from Sunday because of the snow storm, were held Monday at the Beam and Miller chapel, with Rev. Delahooke in charge of the services. Pallbearers were Nea Turner, Everett Mayberry, Chester Wolfe and LaVerne Miner, all classmates of Anamosa High School, 1933.

Letha Potter Quigley was born February 16, 1916, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Potter, of Anamosa. In this community she grew to young womanhood, and graduated from the Anamosa High School in 1933.

MORTUARY.

The Death of Thos. O'Rourke.

The Daily Register-Call of Central City, Colorado, under date of Sept. 18, chronicles the death of Thos. O'Rourke, only son of our esteemed and venerable citizen, Farrell O'Rourke, Esq., at the age of 26 years. The young man's death occurred in the village of Nevadaville, near Central City, in Gilpin Co., Col., where the mine of the Old Colony Mining Company is located. It was in this mine he met his death. The statement that it was in the Rio Grande mine is a mistake. The Rio Grande is situated in the mountain region further south. The deceased was crushed in the caving of the mine through his solicitude for the safety of his fellow workmen. He could easily have saved himself, but he stopped while the huge masses of rock were falling around him to warn his companions of their danger and thus offered himself a sacrifice upon the altar of manly duty. A ponderous piece of rock rolled upon him, cutting off his left foot an inch or two above the toes, and breaking his right leg in four places between the ankle and the knee. It was not thought at first that his injuries were of a fatal character. His sufferings were terrible but his youth and natural vigor were believed to be sufficient to carry through the ordeal. Providence ordered it otherwise. When the father of the young man arrived in Nevadaville on Monday, he found his son was the recipient of every attention that an abundance of money and a generous heart could dictate. The laboring men of the village and district were a unit in their wish to do everything possible to save his life, and nobly did they respond to every call in his behalf. The two leading physicians of Central City were employed to attend him, and to make sure that no chance of his recovery was lost, a physician of high repute was summoned from Denver. And when death claimed him for his own the Wednesday following the father's arrival, there was a widespread manifestation of sorrow. This deep feeling of regret and respect also took form in generous acts as well as words. The laboring men again showed how royal a spirit fills the sons of toil. They had the body embalmed and placed in a costly casket, paid all the incidental expenses of the sickness and after having borne the ashes to the Catholic church in Central City, where an eloquent sermon was delivered by Rev. Father M. J. Carmody, they carried them to the Union Pacific depot and a ticket to Anamosa was bought and given to the bereaved father. Mr. O'Rourke arrived at Marietta via the St. Paul road, at 10:20 last Saturday night. He was met there by Messrs. M. F. Sullivan, M. Gavin, James Kinney, William McDonald and E. J. Wilsey, who bore the silent one to the home of his father where it was received by a large number of friends and relatives. The next Sunday morning funeral obsequies were held in St. St. Patrick's Catholic church, Rev. Father Power officiating. A graceful eulogy was pronounced by the reverend father, in which a tribute was paid to the worth of the young man who was calm in death, and the heroism with which he had met his fate. Messrs. Phil. Ballard, Pat. Foarde, Robert Washington, John Power, Jerry Whalen and Edward Dolye were pall-bearers. Interment was made in St. Patrick's cemetery. Upwards of eighty carriages joined in the funeral train.

Card of Thanks.

EDITOR JOURNAL.—I desire to express my gratitude to the workingmen of Central City and Nevadaville, Colorado, for the kindness shown my son during his sickness, for the generous respect for his memory they manifested after his death, and for the courtesies extended to me in the hour of affliction. I would also return thanks to the physicians and nurses who attended my son so faithfully by day and night to alleviate his sufferings, and to Rev. Father Carmody, the worthy priest who smoothed my boy's dying pillow, ministering to him the sweet consolations of religion. Nor would I forget the esteem and affection displayed by Anamosa friends at this time of sorrow. These things have been as a heavenly shadow to me and to my family. God bless you all is the fervent wish of
FARRELL O'ROURKE.

D. C. Prader Dies Suddenly.

Mr. Adolph C. Prader died last Friday night after a short illness. He returned from Cedar Rapids the evening before in a diseased condition. His death came very suddenly, and because of his youth and the advantages he might have had was particularly distressing. He was a young man of health and business energy previous to the acquisition of an unfortunate habit that mastered him and burned the candle of life at both ends. His mother had property which she was willing to spend in his education, and use in the purchase of advantages which would make him a respected citizen. She sent him to the State School of Pharmacy at Iowa City where he manifested studious industry. His school mates speak well of his work there, his good nature and his obliging kindness. He commenced business in Monticello in a determined manner, and had the good will of his associates. He was naturally a generous, whole souled affable young man, and the pity is that he should have been his own worst enemy. The result was inevitable. Mr. Prader was born in Richland township July 11, 1874, and was consequently 27 years old. The funeral services were conducted by the Modern Woodmen of America, last Monday, the funeral sermon being preached by Rev. C. C. Warner. He carried life insurance to the amount of $3000 payable to his mother, now deceased.

OBITUARY.

Gretta Belle Ketcham was born Nov. 9, 1904 and died March 21, 1906.

Last Wednesday when the word was brought to anxious friends, "Little Gretta died this morning", the first thought was, Why should such a dear baby have to be taken? Why could her innocent life not have been spared? But "Still on the lips of all who question, the finger of God's silence lies," and we shall not know until the time comes for the explaining of all the sad mysteries of life.

Little Gretta was the youngest daughter of George T. and Katherine Ketcham of Cass. Only a little more than sixteen months of life were given her, but in that short time she won the love of many hearts. Her friends were more than her days". Perfectly healthy and uncommonly beautiful, she was an attractive child from the very first; added to her personal beauty she possessed such a sweet, loving disposition that she captivated all she met. She had the dearest little smile, which made the one on whom she bestowed it feel that she knew just how much one loved her.

Her illness was brief but severe; taken with croup on Saturday morning, nothing that loving care or skill could do averted the sad end, and after four days of suffering, the sweet blue eyes closed, and another little one was gathered safe in the arms of infinite love, but left behind her a desolate, heart-broken household.

A very simple service was held at the Ketcham home on Friday. Beautiful flowers in profusion surrounded the little waxen form which seemed like a being fresh from the hands of God and waiting for the breath of life.

The Rev. Brimacombe made a few remarks the central thought of which was "He shall carry the lambs in His bosom." Mrs. Leggie and Mr. W. Hale sang two favorite selections and then the dear little one was laid to rest in the cemetery by the church on the hill. The pall bearers were Parke Ogden, Ben Griffith, Morris Croot and Chris Conrad. * * *

Nearly a Third Class Office.

Another important evidence of Cascade's material growth is evidenced in Postmaster Fagan's announcement that if the revenues of the postoffice continue to increase as they have in the past six months the local department will be eligible to the third class list. In the event that it maintains this moderate gain it will become a salaried office.
